Residents Advised to be Weary of Contractors Claiming to Work on Behalf of West Valley City

West Valley City – West Valley City residents are advised to think twice when approached by contractors offering their services. Recently a company known as Amen Paving has approached West Valley City residents with code violations claiming to offer their services with the blessing of West Valley City. This is not the case.

“West Valley City does not recommend or refer any contractor for private projects without the consent and cooperation of all involved parties,” says Director of Public Relations Aaron Crim. “In the few cases that contractors are recommended, the residents being approached are notified well in advance and all parties – the resident and the contractor – are familiar with one another.”

There are few circumstances where contractors are recommended. These include grants provided through the Housing Authority to provide home repairs. Any unsolicited offers are not endorsed by the City.

Residents who are approached by contractors offering to bring their property into compliance with City Code are encouraged to call West Valley City Code Enforcement at 801-963-3289.
